New Business

Curriculum Manager DeChano-Cook presented a draft process for reviewing new centers and institutes. The proposed process for the creation of new centers and institutes will be within the curriculum system. The committee reviewed the draft and engaged in discussion regarding potential revisions and additional considerations.

Key points of discussion included:

1. The inclusion of separate fields to clearly distinguish between the Major Focus Area and any Additional Focus Areas
2. The addition of a concise statement outlining the centers or institute's mission and goals to ensure clarity of purpose
3. The incorporation of a general funding plan narrative within the proposal, with the option to submit a more detailed funding plan addressing long-term financial sustainability
4. Clarification of the appropriate routing process, including whether proposals should be routed directly to the respective dean and whether such routing implies formal sponsorship or financial commitment
5. The expectation that proposals articulate how administrative and operational responsibility will be shared across participating departments and colleges
6. Consideration of whether distinct proposal forms or routing pathways are necessary for different classifications of centers or institutes (e.g., university-level centers requiring review or approval by the Board of Trustees).

The committee will incorporate feedback and continue refinement of the proposed process.

Announcements

None.
