4. The Faculty Senate executive board council and committee's meeting with the President was held early in September, discussion included challenges posed by the current political climate, higher education in general, immigration, and international students. Better and more transparent communication by the administration was discussed as important to quell fears and improve retention.

Ex Officio Hadley did not provide a report

Reports of University Representatives

Milostan provided the Haenicke Institute for Global Education report such that Associate Vice President Max will be working on a university-wide international travel policy. Enrollment is a 10% decrease from last year. The decrease was forecasted at a much higher rate. New international student numbers are up from last year. Haenicke Institute for Global Education (HIGE) received funding from American Association of University Professors (AAUP) is working on the plan about how the funds will be utilized. Currently, the intention is to make these funds available for faculty international travel and global classrooms. IEC would like to be involved with determining the distribution of the award annually. Serving on the committee doesn't preclude a member from applying, but the member can't vote on their own application. Funds are only for faculty. Graduate students should apply for travel funds through the Graduate College.

Metro-Roland added that the recipient of the Global Engagement Award has been selected, and invited all council members to the ceremony.

Graduate Student Association did not provide a report.

The Western Student Association representative Tufeil reported that transportation is a serious issue.

Chair Dennis mentioned welcoming international students working group and a survey that is in the works on international students experiences to help with new international students' transition.

Reports of College International Committees

Gupta reported that the College of Engineering circled back to last year's unresolved issues of health insurance, transportation, and housing. Dean Butt traveled abroad, and established connections globally. One faculty member worked with a university from Hungary. Their students couldn't receive visa and didn't make it to WMU on time.

McMorrow reported that the Health and Human Services College held its first meeting was last week, with more representation on the committee than last year. Need to review tasks and priorities.

Popkova reported that the Arts and Sciences College has not yet held an official meeting but the committee is in the process of scheduling a meeting. Popkova met with the Associate Dean, overseeing the international committee work and reviewed IEC charges and discussed coordination with IEC.
