Faculty Retirement

The Office of Faculty Development (OFD) will be hosting a brown bag virtual discussion at noon on Tuesday, June 16, on the topic of faculty retirement. This virtual session will include recently retired emeriti faculty sharing their experiences and Dr. Toni Woolfork-Barnes, Director of the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute (OLLI) at WMU, who will discuss options to teach and take classes through OLLI. Additional topics that will be explored include personal and professional questions faculty may be struggling with as they ponder the decision about retirement, how retired faculty can stay engaged in teaching and research fields, and how to remain connected with colleagues at the University.

WMUx is promoting this event given that it will be home of OFD starting July 1 and is the current home of OLLI. If you have specific topics or questions to share in advance, please contact Lisa Walker. The meeting is being facilitated through WebEx;
